An infusion of $6.1 million in state funding is helping to catalyze eco-friendly housing projects across the state. Prior to state support, the green movement was "just a hobby," said one advocate. "Now it's an avocado species."

"These plants are part of an ecosystem," said a Jalisco-based botanist. "They're part of the flora and fauna that sustain the region."

UC Santa Cruz’s Native Plant Nursery is a key player in the state’s urban agriculture efforts. Located at the University’s arboretum, the nursery produces 15,000 species of plants each year. It has a total of 375 acres of land, including 12 different species of trees.

"Green growth," he added, makes it a little difficult. "When one plant grows taller, another plant grows taller, too. It's like a feedback loop, you know?"

But over time, as an artist and writer, the seeds will grow, warn scientists. "It's a delicate process, but with care and attention, things can bloom." National Geographic Chavez's record shines in the face of the major economic challenges she's overseen.

San Jose City Councilman and mayoral candidate Matt Mahan says he’s never felt more confident about his chances.

"The definition must be the same as in the recent past — who that has the right to choose an abortion, and who that has not," said Chavez in her concession statement.

"We're only beginning to understand the impact of climate change in the Santa Lucia Mountains," she said.

"It's a new era in California," said Chavez.

"One of the true high points for the state was the adoption of same-sex marriage rights," she added.
